

Have Windows update the drivers.

Windows automatically offers updates for certain drivers. The option is located under "Windows Update" in the Settings and must be started manually.

Settings -> Windows Update > Advanced options
-> Optional updates -> Driver updates

That is where Windows distributes many up-to-date drivers it has detected: chipset drivers, network drivers, audio drivers, printer drivers, and sometimes even graphics drivers, etc. Unfortunately, however, not all driver updates are detected automatically. But for most important drivers, it is usually sufficient.
